AEGIS - AARC Community IPR Policy

When contributions are made to the AARC community and/or AEGIS, the contributors must declare that they have not breached any IPR conditions by contributing the material. This applies to all kinds of contributions.

Persons contributing to AARC community and/or AEGIS work accept that the final result will be made available under an open source license according to the following principles:

- For documents, reports and presentations: Creative Commons CC BY 4.0 unless otherwise agreed and for justified reasons.
- For software:
  - 2-clause BSD license, or any other appropriate open source license that has been agreed with the AEGIS members for new software being developed within AARC community/AEGIS;
  - a license that falls under OSD in case of existing software being contributed to AARC Community/AEGIS.

The IPR Policy does not expect any transfer of IPR between the signatories. However, if reaching the AARC community and/or AEGIS goals requires mapping the IPR ownership to a single legal entity, GÉANT association agrees to take over the ownership and the responsibilities associated with it.
